REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Claims

1,2,4,13,14,16, and 19 were rejected as anticipated under 35 U.S.C. 102 (b) in view of WO 99/37198 (Gwilliam) in Office Action 5/17/07. Applicant argues the following :

Gwilliam does not disclose a base plate including one or more nozzle apertures. The Office Action mistakenly labels a sidewall 39 as being a base plate (see page 5, lines 2-3). Contrary to the Examiner's statement in the Response to Arguments, Gwilliam explicitly states that reference numbers 39 and 41 comprise sidewalls that are integral to the underside 52 of the shroud 21.

Gwilliam does not disclose a skid plate that assembles to a base plate. Gwilliam does not even disclose two plates that are assembled together. In contrast, Gwilliam discloses a bottom plate 26 that assembles to an open portion of a shroud 21. Gwilliam discloses that the bottom plate 26 provides a chamber floor for holding accumulated cleaning powder (see page 5, lines 6-8) and further discloses that it is "tray-shaped" (see page 4, line 25). Gwilliam does not mention a skid plate. Gwilliam does not teach or suggest that the bottom plate performs a skid plate function, and instead the bottom plate 26 (or tray 30) performs a tray function.

The Response to Arguments section of the final Office Action asserts that "the chassis bottom (21) is the structural equivalent [of a base plate] with the same function as the claimed base plate. The only difference is in the name of the parts." This is incorrect. A "base plate" by definition includes a plate. A plate is commonly defined as a planar surface, a sheet, or a thin, fiat or nearly flat solid object. In contrast, the shroud 21 of Gwilliam comprises a bottom portion comprising mostly apertures, including apertures for the brushrolls and an open chamber, wherein the bottom plate 26 of Gwilliam forms a substantially closed chamber. Labeling the shroud 21 of Gwilliam as being a "plate" defies any reasonable understanding of a plate and is completely illogical.

These arguments are considered to be persuasive and the rejection withdrawn.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
